

Potowmack Chapter Virginia Native Plant Society

Covering Your Tracks: Excellent native plant ground covers and how to use them.

Thursday, April 11

7:30 - 9:00 pm

Green Spring Gardens
4603 Green Spring Road
Alexandria, VA 22312
703 642-5173

Clockwise: Christmas fern, golden ragwort, creeping phlox. Photos by:
Sally and Andy Wasowski, Stefan Bloodworth, and Mrs. W.D. Bransford.
Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center.

VNPS programs are free and open to the public.
No reservations are necessary for lectures.

Typically, the term "groundcover" refers to evergreen, low-growing plants (frequently non-native plants) which are employed under trees or other structures--often with disastrous and invasive results.

In this lecture Janet Davis, owner and principal designer of Hill House Nursery, will broaden the old meaning of groundcover, and show how some of the hardest working native plants can enrich our landscapes by "covering ground" in some of the most difficult garden situations. You'll be pleasantly surprised by the choices and delighted by the resulting habitat you create when choosing and planting these native plants.

Potowmack Chapter of the Virginia Native Plant Society
PO Box 5311
Arlington, VA 22205
www.vnps-pot.org and www.vnps.org

